Memorandum for

As you know, I have recently visited management officers in the Departments of Navy, State, and Post Office, the International Cooperation Administration, the Civil Service Commission, and the Atomic Energy Commission to see how they handle their internal directives. One significant fact that has emerged from this investigation already is that in none of these departments does the principal legal officer write, edit, or comment on the substance or procedures of the internal directives.
